Carroll Jennings, of Red ouse, is part of a two-man crew which began Monday to uprat the second largest vertical spindle rotary surface grinder in the United States. It's located at Virginia Grear Machine Corporation of Lynchburg, where a number of Appomattox county men are employed.

Costing approximately $60,000, the new machine weights 66,000 pounds and is located in a 20 x 16 foot pit at the plant at 800 Kemper St.

The work table of the grinder is 84 inches in diameter and can handle pieces up to 36 inches in length. It can remove metal at the rate of seven cubic inches a minute and can hold tolerances to within a thousandth of an inch.

Employing a new concept in abrasive machine work, the new grinder will be operated on a two - shift basis by James Burnett and Carroll Jennings under the direct supervision of Allison B. Landrum, plant superintendent.

A magnetic separator is used in conjunction with the grinder which pulls left - over metal from the coolant tank.

The Appomattox - Southside program is sponsored by the Appomattox and Southside Baptist Associations, under the direction of Rev. William D. Gravatt, pastor of the Burkeville Baptist Church.

Rev. Gravatt emphasized that although the program is presented by the Baptist denomination, members of all denominations are invited to attend. Graduates of accredited high schools may earn college credit, and those not interested in college credit may qualify for a certificate-of-roll in the classes and are not required to take tests or examinations.

The classes, said Rev. Gravatt, "are not only a great asset to Sunday school teachers, but also to those who simply seek to increase their knowledge of the Bible."

RAD Group To Plan County Promotion

Almost everyone of the thirty or more citizens present at Friday evening's Civil War Centennial meeting had comments and suggestions to offer in the promotion of the 1965 Commemoration of the Peace made between Lee and Grant at historic McLean House, Appomattox.

Centennial Committee chairman William C. Hibbard set forth the plans which his committee has in mind for April 9, 1965, plus other suggestions for promoting tourism in the county.

Upon securing approval from county supervisors, the group present Friday evening voted to have the Rural Area Development committee create a subcommitte to work with the Centennial group and to plan for county-wide emphasis on the Centennial years, 1963-1965, and also to consider a pageant, outdoor "sound and light" program, and other promotion efforts to increase tourist travel to Appomattox.

"Golden Opportunity"

Appomattox mayor, Dr. S. R. Lawson, who had appeared earlier before the county supervisors along with Dr. J. A. Mathews to request Friday night's meeting said, "It's my feeling that we will miss a golden opportunity if we don't get down and do something."

Dr. Mathews said, "I feel that all the counties surrounding can get together to promote tourism. We should keep it (Centennial Commemoration) in good taste AND increase the economy of the county."

Chairman of the Board of Supervisors said, "I think we have a personal interest in this (Centennial plans), and a responsibility, though at present we are operating in the red."

Offers of Help

Centennial chairman William Hubbard read a letter from Reverend O. D. Moore, head of the Baptist ministerial association, which said the Appomattox ministers were sympathetic to the general aims of the Peace Commemoration, and pledging clergymen's help, if needed.

Hubbard also read a letter from C. Lewis McDearmon, Appomattox Realtor, with an offer to make property available for a tourists' center or other Centennial commemoration use.

Said Wescoat Wolfe, historian from Appomattox Court House National Historical Park, "Appomattox is just as important as Gettysburg — perhaps more so"! He gave the opinion that there should be a lot of preliminary activities among local groups before April 9, 1965.

"However," he added, "it's not fair to the United States to put the commemoration in the hands of Appomattox alone. This is of national importance."

Mrs. Grey Holland advised the group that the Appomattox Garden Club has been making plans for a beautification project. Let's not depend entirely on the Park Service," she said, "and let's not forget to include teenagers in our plans."

Centennial Committee Goals

Centennial chairman Hubbard set forth the committee's tentative goals to the supervisors: He said:

"The committee plans to hold a peace commemoration at the old courthouse on the Sunday following April 9, 1963, with an appropriate historian as one of the guest speakers.

The committee also plans to invite the President of the United States, these U. S. Army generals who have signed a peace treaty and all former presidents.

"During the summer of 1963, the committee hopes to sponsor the participation by states having battle groups at Appomattox at the 1865 surrender in some type of commemoration service which would rot result in the placing of statues or monuments.

"The committee plans to rededicate the Confederate statue in the local courtyard during the summer of 1964, with the SONS OF Confederate Veterans as special guests.

"The United Daughters of the Confederacy will be asked to sponsor a program at the Confederate cemetery, Hubbard told the supervisors, during which a 35-star
